Assignment: Take the timed Insight Assessment logic test and reflect on it.

After three questions, I realized that this is a test I have taken multiple times before. This may have affected my perception of the test.

I recognized almost every question and was able to use thinking strategies that were taught to me through other courses after evaluating myself on this test.

Again, however, the questions required me to think and use specific strategies to get an answer I believed in. They were not standard questions and forced me to think about details, remembering certain numbers and elements that I usually am not asked to.

I can say that I enjoy taking tests like these, as they make me think outside the box and don't frustrate me.

Mental thinking is definitely a requirement, adding another dimension to possible answer choices.

Some of the answer choices were simply ridiculous, while others made me question my thought process and sometimes forced me to re-read the question.

Overall, I think the test was an abnormal one that pushed buttons in my brain that aren't used to being pushed. I am genuinely interested to see my improvement or difference in thinking after taking this course.
